

An important man was going on a journey. He was a master and had several servants. He asked his servants to look after his home and business when he was away.

Each servant was given an amount of money that the master knew they could cope with.